

I have a passion for organization, meticulousness and simplification of processes. I'd rather not do it twice if I can do it once, which of course leaves me with more time to do something fun or learn something new!

For many years I watched with glee how people would organize their homes, lives, events etc. and wondered why they did it and if everybody was like that. Then I realized, we aren't all cut from the same cloth...lol. Some of us are more inclined to be organized while others aren't. Don't get me wrong, as organized as I am, some days it just doesn't cut it; however I've spent years developing certain habits so it's easier for me to fall right back in line. Being organized isn't about perfection, you have to organize in a way that's right for you. In other words, it shouldn't stress you out because that's exactly what you're trying to avoid.

When I started this website I knew I wanted to share my life experiences through my blog page. I also knew I wanted to express my passion for organizing in a way that would help others. It took me over a year, after starting the website, to decide how I wanted to share that with you. It's funny how my family and friends kept encouraging me to do something along this line but I never listened. Now here I am. I've spent over 20 years in various entities, including services clubs, gaining valuable knowledge which I've combined with my love for organization and a flare for creativity. This has now blossomed into yet another service offering on my website.

Join me as I share with you tips and tricks on how to organize your life and space so that you can, at the very least, reduce your stress and find time to do more of the things that matter most to you. I'm constantly learning new ideas, technologies and techniques that help me to be better prepared to serve you.
